(Next to the levee and River Walk along the Mississippi River)

The University of Missouri’s School of Visual Studies’ (SVS) Art on the Move outreach program presents a photography exhibition by MU alumna, Kayla Huett, a Poplar Bluff native. Photographed over the course of almost 10 years, Kayla Huett’s We Captured Fish and Talked is an intimate portrait of small towns in Missouri along the Great River Road. Inspired by the rural authenticity of Mark Twain’s writing, these images capture a community and region with deep roots and a varying future.

The exhibition is on view April 23 – May 19, at River Walk Gallery located in the Hart-Stepp House, 711 Waters St., New Madrid, MO 63869. Two receptions will be held at the River Walk Gallery on Monday, April 23, at noon and 5:00 pm. Meet the artist-Kayla Huett and learn about her professional art career and educational path at University of Missouri School of Visual Studies. Exhibit and receptions are free and open to the public. Hours for the gallery are 10 am – 5 pm daily. Phone (573)-748-4060 for more information about the gallery.

Art on the Move provides real-life experiences for MU SVS students and alumni, providing hands-on professional career building opportunities by returning them to their Missouri hometowns or home regions to share their art with others and play an instrumental part in recruiting the next generation of SVS students.

Huett holds a BFA in photography and fibers from the University of Missouri – Columbia, MO.

This exhibit is brought to you by MU School of Visual Studies, University of Missouri Extension and the River Walk Gallery located in the Hart-Stepp House.
